

Enterprise Requirement Planning (ERP) Results

Challenges associated with ERP implementations and achieving expected benefits continues to be a concern for project teams and C-level executives in organizations of all sizes. Whether a company is undertaking their first implementation, upgrading or adding functionality ERP efforts require involvement of all business and IT stakeholders.

THE CHALLENGES ARE REAL AND COMPLEX. STUDIES REVEAL THAT OVER HALF OF ERP IMPLEMENTATIONS FAIL TO MEET BUDGET, SCHEDULE OR EXPECTATIONS.

ERP success depends on the organizations ability to coalesce all requirements into a framework linked to business objectives. Problems in any of these critical areas can derail the entire effort resulting in Cost Overruns, Business Distraction and Lost Strategic Initiatives.

- Business process design and functionality
- Technical Infrastructure and sustain capabilities
- Financial Controls and SOX compliance
- Project and Program management
- Service provider management (consultants, hardware and software)
- Knowledge Transfer
- Change management and training
- Executive involvement and expectation management
- Benefits realization and on-going management

Effectively managing across all areas in a cohesive fashion organizations can achieve envisioned results. This requires an ongoing balanced, objective and insightful assessment of the project plan, progress, organization, the people and the technology to ensure that the effort stays on track and delivers.
